According to Library and Archives Canada "Students should ensure that the use of copyrighted material from other sources in their theses meets the requirements of the Copyright Act. Some written permissions from copyright holder(s) may be required". Educational exceptions (such as fair dealing) may apply if certain conditions are met.

Using a greater amount than what is considered an 'insubstantial amount' of a work requires a written letter of permission from the copyright holder.

Full attribution be given to the original creator of the work, regardless of how much you are including in your theses.

The Copyright Guide for Students (libguides.smu.ca/studentcopyright) on the library website goes into more detail on copyright procedures.

If you are unsure about the copyright guidelines of the work you are using you can contact the library's copyright office at copyright@smu.ca
